Daily Proverb—"The mind ought sometimes to be diverted that it may turn the water to thinking."

Naturally a land overrun with Bobshovils, like Mexico, wouldn't be overly strong for any kind of religion.

Lady Astor says she is coming over here to remain in "some place where it is perfectly quiet." Poor, deluded woman!

In the light of the manifestations of this thing element down there, it begins to look as though Newport aspires to become known as the Canton of Kentucky.

"A dog hit a harrier over in London, Ohio, the other day," the Columbus Dispatch tells us, "and our guess is that it was too hot for even a dog to blam!" But which did?

Since he started making them, Mr. Ford has put 14,000,000 lizzies upon the market. Think of one man taking upon his shoulders a responsibility like that!

Mussolini has called upon the people of Italy to return to war bread. They may stand for that, but to be on the safe side he had better steer clear of the other substitutes.

It may not be news, but rather than take any chances it may be just as well for the reader to prepare for a shock. Here it is. France paid us $10,000,000 in cash, Monday, as interest on her war debt.

It is announced in London that a scientist over there is prepared to sell sunshine in pills. If he can put up moonshine in the same form, he's going to make a lot of people over here sit up and take notice.

According to a movie magnate, there are only seven stars in the film industry. Tony, Strongheart, Rin Tin Tin and Pater the Great, of course, but how about the other three?

Considering the flood of candidates the primary system has loose upon a long-suffering people, the voters of Ohio should get rid of the primary if for no other reason than to self-defense.

Let's be fair to Miss Leongien, who is to come over here for a four-months tennis tour, for $110,000. A sum like $110,000 is an awful lot of money, and Suzanne possibly realizes that she isn't getting younger daily.

"Ohio Coal Goes on New Basis," a headline in a morning paper told us yesterday. We do not pretend to say that we know exactly what that means, but it's a pretty safe guess that it's another way of telling us that the price will go higher.

Maybe the sun will keep on throwing off light and heat for 15,000,000,000 years, as the scientists tell us, but it strikes us that it is a little bit wasteful of the latter just at present.

A Kansas City story, yesterday, was to the effect that the liquor issue is paramount in the "Dry West." If the thing were contagious, we would be inclined to believe that the "Dry West" had been associating with some of our dry politicians.

Ten days having elapsed without report of any singular encounter in the editorial rooms of the Chicago Tribune, we are just about forced to the conclusion that Rudolph Valentino, conscious of the danger to which he might expose a certain portrayal of all that is highest and best in art, has decided to forego his desire to "snap a real fist" into that "bagging bag."

"Cry Baby Bandits."

"Five confessed gunmen who have earned a reputation as swagging daredevils of the underworld, were dubbed the 'Cry Baby Bandits' by the police today," read a wire story from New York City, a day or two ago. "They broke down in the police line-up and in tears pleaded with witnesses not to identify them."

The quietest had been arrested and confessed the attempted robbery of a private bank in the Bronx. In the hope of connecting them with some recent New York robberies they were placed in a line-up before the victims of the robberies and two of them were identified as members of a band of five which shot and killed a man and a woman in the robbery of a grocery.

They were regular daredevils, they knew no fear, when heavily armed, they attacked and killed their surprised and unarmed victims. But when apprehended and placed in the line-up, they shed tears and begged and pleaded that they be not identified and made to suffer for their crimes.

And that is usually the way. "Brave" when their victims haven't a chance, and cowards when faced by the possibility of punishment. The more one learns of the hold-up tribe, the more firmly is one impressed that it is made up of cowards; the more one knows of it, the more readily comes agreement with the view of the army captain, quoted in these columns several days since, that "the man who kills for the purpose of robbery is a rat, and should be treated as such."

Investigation Business Overdone.

The high cost of investigations is not the least of governmental problems, holds Congressman Martin R. Madden, of Illinois, high alike in both time and money wasted.

Writing for a well-known magazine, Congressman Madden cites a number of cases in support of his contention. He says that some five or six million words, covering more than 11,000 printed pages, were hurled back and forth in the senate and house from 1913 to 1923 on the single question of coal; that seventeen hearings before a many different committees and boards were held and that most of the good results which might have been extended from this great expenditure of breath and printer's ink have been smothered beneath tons of excess verbiage. The practical value of these coal hearings may be appreciated by the reader if he will study his coal bills for the period mentioned and recall that in two years of the period we were engaged in war. In a word, the more investigations, the higher the price we paid for coal.

Since 1910, senate and house hearings and investigations alone have cost the country $1,600,000, while the expenditure for the past fiscal year was $276,000. Hearings in the sixty-seventh congress cost the country for printing alone $138,085.36, and for the fiscal year of 1924 the printing bill was $228,829.21 for 52,612 pages of printed testimony.

"We might give the facts in our own words, but much of the merit might be lost were we to depart from Congressman Madden's way of presenting the situation," he says.

"The hearings are 'lime saviors.' A hearing calls busy men from all over the United States; sometimes it calls them back the next year to go over much the same ground.

"Many thousands of dollars have been spent on these 'special hearings,' much of it properly, but much of it on duplicated testimony. I have cited the figures for coal. That's only one instance. Think of agriculture, Muscle Shoals, the shipping board, postal rates and salaries, the proposed department of education bill and radio. Prohibition is new on the list, but perhaps we shall yet add it to our collection of hardy annuals.

"Then there was the question of helping the distillers industry which a few years ago was the subject of four 'special hearings,' two in the house and two in the senate, and was productive of more than 3,000 pages of testimony, as well as claiming much of the time of fourteen busy congressmen.

"The oyster, which not long ago fell under suspicion as a carrier of typhoid fever germs, caused another flurry of high-priced investigation in the senate and house. Despite the fact that some twenty pamphlets have been issued by the government covering every phase of the oyster's domestic life, dragging forth his most personal secrets and even telling how to cook him, hearings were undertaken and it was at last arranged that the state governments should certify in the physical perfection of the oyster, the public health service should certify to the accuracy of the state certificate and the department of agriculture should see to it that no impure or unclean oyster was permitted to go into interstate commerce.

"One whole storehouse in the senate wing of the capitol is filled with reports which we're not deemed important enough to print, and in 1925 2,500,000 useless copies of hearing publications were disposed of as 'waste paper,' while millions more will have to be consigned to the scrap heap year after year."

The saddest phase of the thing is that congress is not content to wrestle with these "hardy annuals," as Mr. Madden humorously puts it. It is ever on the lookout for more to be added to its list, and meanwhile is always ready and willing to take up any other subject which may present itself upon which to waste its time and the people's money, with the result that the bills for investigations and hearings mount higher and higher, year by year.

Beyond all question, the investigation business has been carried beyond all sense and reason and fully justified the broadside fired at it by Congressman Madden.

Occasional developments rather go to indicate that the White House spokesman also is at Lake Osgood for his summer vacation.

While it is true that all the girls who have thus far attempted to swim the English channel have failed, all of them have succeeded in getting their pictures into the papers, and may be they have accomplished their purpose after all.

The superintendent of the Philadelphia public schools says the schoolboy of today is better behaved than was his father, which, as we recall the boys of our school days, strikes us as another case of dealing with faint praise.

Some time between Saturday night and Monday morning, the private gallery of a New York City collector was looted of objects of art of a value of $100,000, which goes to show how lucky some of us are. Nobody ever heard of a hard-working spreader of joy and sunshine in paragraphs suffering a loss like that.

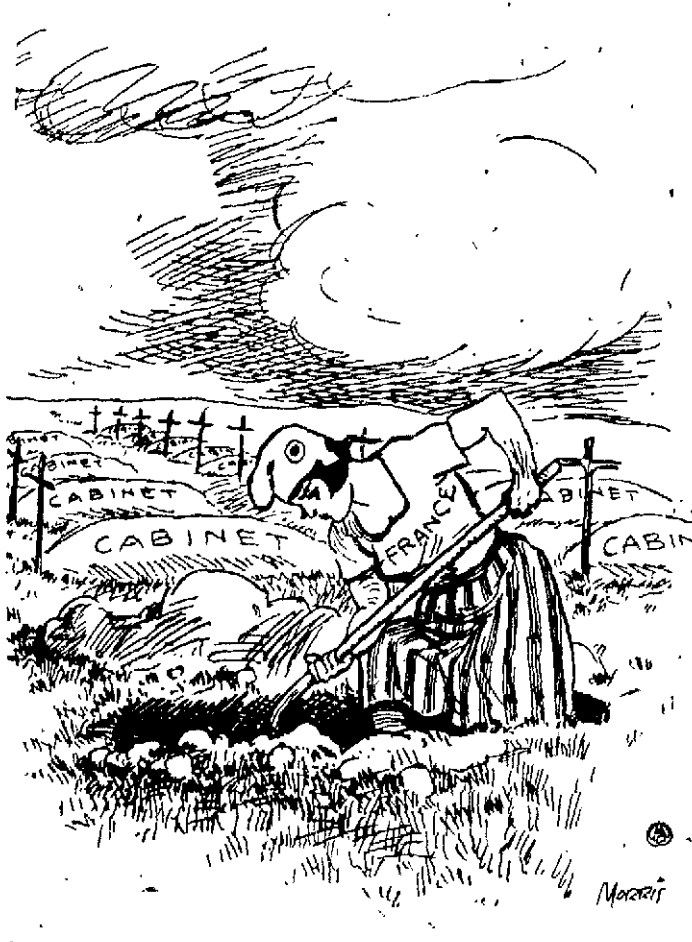

Poems That Live.

THE LIGHT OF OTHER DAYS

Oh! in the still night
Ere slumber's chain has bound me,
Found memory brings the light
Of other days around me:
The smiles, the tears
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken,
The eyes that shone
Now dimmed and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken!
Thus in the still night,
Ere slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad memory brings the light
Of other days around me,
When I remember all
The friends so linked together
I've seen around me fall
Like leaves in autumn weather.
I feel like one
Who trends alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are dim,
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!
Thus in the still night,
Ere slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

Reds Win Two Close Games Over Braves; Indians Lose to Red Sox in Bargain Bill

Cincy Club Stops Losing Streak and Wallops Beantown Outfit in Double-Header; George Burns Hits Four Doubles in Twin Games

THE Cincinnati Reds plunged right back into the pennant swim in the National League yesterday by taking two close games from the Braves, 1 to 0 and 3 to 2. The double win marked the end of six straight losses for the Reds.

Carl Mays was in excellent form for the Reds in the first game. Henry Wertz was also in great form, an error in the first inning on a hit by Fritz being responsible for the only run of the game.

Adolpho Lange struck his winning stride in the second game and outpitched both Genevick and Mogridge.

Boston's first victory over Cleveland in the first game of double header was featured by a heroic fourth inning in which the Red Sox scored six runs and the Indians were losing 7 to 2. In the eighth, Zahrner blanked the Tribe, 2 to 0. Joe Shaube was the losing hurler. Zahrner allowed only five hits.

George Burns yesterday ran into the most remarkable doubles complex he has had this season, getting three two-runners in a row.

Two of them in one inning—in the first game of a double-header with the Red Sox, and another in the second game. Burns hit a double in the first inning of the first game, and another in the second game.

Gay Bush, of the Cubs, trimmed the Giants, 5 to 3, after the Giants had run their winning streak to five games by taking the opener, 5 to 4.
